TECHNICAL PROJECTS

Insuring Against Going Viral: Life Expectancy on Spotify Top Charts | (dsury.com/bohemian-rhapsody)
- Quantified interaction effect between fixed subscription premiums and royalty payment losses for viral songs
- Programmed automatic web scraping and analysis tools in R to gather, compile (> 15 million lines of data in .csv), and summarize Spotify metrics for user-specified time and region granularity
- Integrated relational databases (PostgreSQL, Access) to query data and perform empirical and analytical estimations to construct models to infer seasonality trends and consumer behavior
- Applied basic actuarial concepts (Monte Carlo, frequency/severity, loss development, trend selection) to model popularity decay as well as quantify estimated loss due to royalty payments for the life of a song on Spotify Top Charts

Livetype TeX Library (GitHub Atom, Open-Source) | (dsury.com/tex)
- Built a customizable CoffeeScript (.cson) library for code completion and error correction, enabling real-time rapid typesetting of precise technical notes in a fast-paced challenging lecture setting by integrating GitHub Atom functions, packages and libraries
- Currently volunteering under Berkeley Statistics professor Jim Pitman as scribe for Stochastic Processes

The Infinite Actuary: Technical Skills Course | (dsury.com/projects)
- Built a MS Access database for an electronics company featuring different products and brands for warranty sales and loss, and queried data to generate summary KPI dashboards in Excel
- Constructed a simple life insurance pricing model based on IRS prescribed mortality tables and various defined benefit plans
